

Cellular phone use on aircraft should continue to be strictly prohibited. There has been no conclusive data offered that this activity does not adversely affect navigation or communication capabilities of the aircraft. Besides this inherent safety issue, flying for many people is stressful enough without the introduction of 100+ cellular conversations going on at once. Needless to say those lacking any cell phone etiquette or common courtesy would only wreak havoc on airline safety professional as well as the general flying public.

Thank you.
